ACTIVITY

Redesign the Misleading Colored Chart.

Chart 1:

1. It shows number of employees working in different departments like Sales, Marketing, Engineering, HR and Finance.
2. The bars have different shades of blue, which can be a little confusing because the colors don't have any specific meaning.
3. I would use the same color for all the bars, like blue, because all the bars are showing the same type of information.

Chart 2:

1. It shows how exam vary from January to September.
2. The colors are based on the exam scores, but the rainbow color scheme is distracting and difficult to interpret. Bright colors may make some scores appear more important even though the bar height already shows the actual score.
3. I would use one simple color for all the bars, we can also use different shades of the same color if we want to different in scores.
